Health Emergency and Disaster Nursing

Editor-in-Chief
Barbra Mann Wall, PhD, RN, FAAN
University of Virginia School of Nursing

We are pleased to invite submissions for a new journal devoted to the field of disaster nursing. Health Emergency and Disaster Nursing (HEDN) is the first dedicated international peer-reviewed journal that supports and contributes to disaster prevention and regeneration by bringing together knowledge and best practice in nursing science. It is the official English-language journal of the Disaster Nursing Global Leader Program (DNGL).

To ensure your research reaches the widest possible audience, the journal is free to access online, and limited hard copies are also available. There are no publication fees.

We welcome all papers reporting scholarly work on the art and science of disaster nursing. We encourage submissions from established scholars inside and outside the field of nursing, as well as from those in the early stages of their careers, including students.

HEDN publishes original manuscripts (empirical or qualitative studies, historical studies, review articles, brief reports), editorials, letters to the Editor, reports on practice in disaster settings, case studies, position papers, commentaries, and book reviews. Particularly important and timely work can be reviewed and disseminated quickly as a “rapid communication”. We also publish “image essays” – brief essays accompanied by images that capture a moment in disaster nursing. All types of images are welcome, and the images or text can be the primary focus. For more information, visit the journal website: hedn.jp

Publication in this new specialist journal will ensure your research reaches a relevant, interested audience of colleagues in the field of disaster nursing.

Further information about HEDN, including submission guidelines, is available at the journal's website: <http://hedn.jp>
